

JAIMEE MOROZOFF

DIRECTOR OF CONSERVATION

Jaimee Morozoff serves as the Director of Conservation at the Nova Scotia Nature Trust, bringing over 15 years of experience in environmental stewardship and land conservation. With a deep passion for protecting Nova Scotia's natural heritage, Jaimee leads the conservation team in their work with strategic land acquisitions, take care of conservation lands, and community engagement initiatives. She holds a Master's degree in Bioscience, Technology and Public Policy, where her thesis focused on the impacts of land management on an endangered butterfly. Jaimee is known for her collaborative spirit, engaging communities and partners to advance innovative conservation projects. When she's not championing the protection of Nova Scotia's landscapes, Jaimee loves gardening, reading, and exploring the province's hidden natural gems with her family.

Thank you, I will plan to arrive around 6 pm. I can bring my laptop and will have a powerpoint of the slide show as a back up.

Bio

Jaimee Morozoff is a mom, partner, avid gardener, and someone who will always find a hidden gem bakery wherever she goes. She is also the Director of Conservation at the Nova Scotia Nature Trust, where she leads the team conserving and caring for land across the province in partnership with landowners, volunteers, and communities. Jaimee brings 20 years of experience in the conservation field, including 2 years with the Nova Scotia Nature Trust, and 14 years with the Nature Conservancy of Canada working in Nova Scotia and across the Prairies.

If you think of any other relevant information that would be of interest to the members, let me know. I'll plan to do a bit of an overview of the Nature Trust and spend some time on the properties that are a part of BMBCL.
